

Application for Membership to the Capital Wing of the Airmen's Preservation Society

The WWII Airmen's Preservation Society is a group of dedicated individuals in six chapters ("wings") stretching from New England to the Mississippi River. Members, both male and female, range in age from young adult to WWII veteran. At air shows and military history events, the Society sets up a complete US Army Air Corps encampment of the type common with tactical (mobile) air units of the European or Pacific Theaters of combat in WWII. Society members "staff" the various locations in WWII period uniforms and strive to re-enact the daily lives of the men and women who lived and fought in these same settings during the war.

The Capital Wing of the Airmen's Preservation Society is based in the Virginia, Maryland and Washington D.C. area. It meets regularly at air shows and living history events on the East Coast, as well as a number of social events throughout the year.

Annual family membership to the group: $50. Full time student: $25.
